

Cervical myelopathy

This is a disease of the cervical spinal cord that is usually caused by compression or narrowing of the spinal canal.

It can lead to serious problems including confinement to a wheelchair. The symptoms include an abnormal gait. The choice of operation depends on the extent of the stenosis and skin compression (pressure from the front or back). We offer patients with cervical myelopathy an opportunity to learn about the various therapeutic options during a comprehensive consultation.